BugMon is a handy little widget that will allow you to stay updated with the latest evolutions in the Bugzilla project right from your computer's desktop. BugMon can serve as a Bugzilla front-end, by allowing you to create new bugs and jump to individual bugs for editing purposes. BugMon Description =====
BugMon is a handy little widget that will allow you to stay updated with the latest evolutions in the Bugzilla project right from your computer's desktop. BugMon can serve as a Bugzilla front-end, by allowing you to create new bugs and jump to individual bugs for editing purposes. What it does: * Synchronize the system date with the Bugzilla project's Last Change Date * If you set a calendar, it will display the today date on the System Tray (Notification Area) * If you enable the Synchronize function, you'll see the Bugzilla Last Change Date on the "Help" menu * You can right-click on the Status and/or Priority, and choose "Synchronize" to open the Bugzilla bug page * The fields are customizable using the Preferences dialog * To avoid duplicating the Bugzilla display, the BugMon Application icon is a link to the Bugzilla website Key Features: * The BugMon interface is based on the standard GWT application LifeCycle pattern * You can click on the floating window and drag it wherever you want * The BugMon application icon can be configured as a link to the Bugzilla website * The BugMon popup dialogs can be minimized * When minimized, the BugMon floating window is preserved in the system tray (Notification Area) * Note: BugMon must have a non-null parent Window in order for it to show up in the Notification Area * BugMon supports localization; see the Preferences dialog for details How it works: * BugMon uses your system's date and time setting to synchronize itself with the project's date * BugMon retrieves the current page's title and author information using a simple HTTP GET request * The BugMon application icon
