September 9, 2012 - The game would look a lot better with HBAO shaders, tessellation and such. We PC gamers with DirectX 11 GPUs feel like we're missing out. Last year, Valve made a big announcement - it released Half-Life 2: Episode Two and began to show it not on game consoles, but on personal computers - and received support for their game engines in Windows 8 with the Fall Creators Update. As Peter Moore, director of engineering at Valve, said at E3 2012, "We believe that at Valve you can do whatever you want, not just what your graphics card allows."
