The vascular renin-angiotensin system (V-RAS) consists of the sites of renin (substance P-releasing fibres) and angiotensin-receptor (AngII-receptor) formation, and the effector mechanisms, composed of the angiotensin-converting enzyme (ACE), angiotensin II (AngII), AngII type-1 (AT1) and type-2 (AT2) receptors. The main blood pressure regulatory system is the sympathetic nervous system (SNS), which has two mechanisms of action: an alpha-adrenergic and a beta-adrenergic one. The V-RAS is the final common pathway for the transmission of both kinds of information to the central nervous system, and hence to the heart. During prolonged activity of the V-RAS the SNS is activated resulting in an increase in blood pressure and SNS tone. The increase in SNS tone can be abolished either by pharmacological blockade of the components of the V-RAS (aldosterone synthesis inhibitor/ACE inhibitor, AngII receptor blocker) or by interruption of the sympathetic nerves entering the peripheral circulation.Prevention of brain injury after experimental subarachnoid hemorrhage in rats by the angiotensin-converting enzyme inhibitor captopril. The mechanisms underlying the development of brain injury after subarachnoid hemorrhage remain unclear. The effect of angiotensin-converting enzyme inhibition with captopril on cerebral blood flow and neurological outcome was studied in a rat model of subarachnoid hemorrhage. Brain injury was induced by the withdrawal of blood through
