He is doing so partly because he wants to let go of his depression, but mostly because he doesn't know what else to do. He lives in a dilapidated house in a small town with his father, a grandiose actor, and his five brothers and sisters. He's so distracted by the otherworldly nature of his life that he can't recall the name of the girl who is carrying his child. He can't even remember how they met, but he has kept his distance from her, the child and his family, since they moved to the town. There is something about her that makes him feel sad, as if he is being touched by the deceased. But in this desolate landscape, what else is there to do?
