It is a utility software to help you convert units. It enables you to convert units using any text field editor such as notepad, browser or spreadsheet. The software does not have an interface and allows you to access all its features by right-clicking on the system tray icon. The software is designed to run silently in the background and constantly scan the users keyboard input to detect conversion or calculator commands. When it recognizes a conversion or calculator command it automatically runs and displays the result. For example, if you are to type in a text field "in>>cm" the software will recognize the convert inches to cm command and will replace that order with the result "2.54cm".
