That does not mean that there are more jobs than in the past. In fact, jobs in the private sector have shrunk. In the USA, economic growth has been disrupted. In the Federal Republic, growth has slowed. Although the German economy has rebounded from the negative trend of the past decade, the Federal Republic is not in a boom. ... The efficiency of German industry has improved in the last few years. This is visible in the longer life cycle of products. However, the growth of the German economy is, in reality, due to a boom in the financial sector and business services. As a result, the additional value added per German is larger. ... Germany is still
