Resolve is the name for a set of small, downloadable Sophos utilities designed to remove and undo the changes made by certain viruses, Trojans and worms. They terminate any virus processes and reset any registry keys that the virus changed. Existing infections can be cleaned up quickly and easily, both on individual workstations and over networks with large numbers of computers. Troj/RKProc-Fam is a family of kernel-mode driver rootkits. Members of Troj/RKProc-Fam are capable of hiding information about certain running processes, providing stealthing by patching the kernel service descriptor table. Troj/Stinx-E is a backdoor Trojan for the Windows platform. Troj/Stinx-E connects to one of several IP addresses and runs continuously in the background, providing a backdoor server which allows a remote intruder to gain access and control over the computer via IRC channels. When first run Troj/Stinx-E copies itself to $sys$drv.exe. Troj/Stinx-E can be instructed to delete, execute, and download and execute files.
