Create a Yahoo! Widget that displays this RSS feed on your web site This plugin requires that you add a Yahoo! RSS feed to your site. You can find out how to do this here: RSS Feeds in HTML Please DO NOT buy any kind of RSS feeder service (they're all a scam). Nah, it's not an RSS feeder. It will let you do it on your own server with your own feed generator if you want. You just have to create a file with the name of your choice, with an extension of.xml in the same folder as the plugin. It will then make a link to your feed for you. This plugin doesn't require an RSS feeder to be present, but you can use it to make your own feed. Feed.php Description: This plugin allows you to add a feed to your theme. KeyMacro Description: You can create a feed by typing the url into the field. Then select the type of feed you want (rss, atom or rss2, rss2-excerpt, rss2-full, rss-itunes) and then click the button. Note that there are already some feed plugins available, but this one is very easy to use.
